Meredith Minkler, University of California, Berkeley

The third edition of Community-Based Participatory Research for Health provides the latest research and practice of community-based participatory research (CBPR) and community-engaged research. This new edition maintains its appeal for students, academics, and practitioners, with its practice-based orientation and health equity lens across multiple fields.

With a majority of new chapters, the book provides a thorough overview of CBPR history, theories of action and participatory research, emerging trends of knowledge democracy, and promising practices.

New material addresses the critical issues of:
—racism, power, and privilege;
—trust development;
—ethical practice within and beyond IRBs;
—cultural humility; and many more.

Organized around the CBPR Conceptual Model, all new case studies illustrate the importance of social context, promising partnering practices, and the added value of community and other stakeholder engagement for intervention development and research design. Partnership evaluation, measures, and outcomes are highlighted, with a revised section on policy outcomes, including global health case studies.

Appendices showcase new CBPR tools, in the text and through web-links, such as:
—Principles of CBPR and community-engaged research
—Data sharing and ownership agreements
—Community-based IRB trainings
—Government and foundation funding
—Evaluation instruments and tools
—Policy-analysis methods
